Educating communities about life's essential resource

Long Island American Water places a strong emphasis on educating customers about water, the one resource that's essential to life. From second-grade students exploring the water cycle to civic group members interested in learning more about the water treatment process, our speakers bureau has something for everyone!

Through our program, your school or organization can arrange to have one of our experts visit your classroom or meeting.

Though programs can vary in content, they all share a common theme: helping people of all ages understand the value of water and its incredible journey from the source to your tap.

Presentations can be tailored to meet your group's needs and interests. Topics include:

- Your Water Company
- Water Quality
- Water Treatment and Distribution
- Watershed Protection
- Conservation
